

Role of the Church Mission Committee

- 1) Provide intentional, passionate, "beating on the door of heaven" prayer for the missionaries and ministries of the church each week. The committee should ask for and also post prayer requests that you get each week in the bulletin or church email for the missionaries you support. Ask your missionaries for answers they have seen.
- 2) Communicate with the missionaries you serve. Ask them how you could help them in their ministry. Hold them accountable to answering that question.
- 3) Be the ministry training arm of the church. Mission committees should find local "training grounds" and then call, encourage, push, and lead your people outside the church walls. Small groups provide a great way for a church to plug into mission and service venues. This is important even for your elementary and junior high kids so that they don't grow up thinking that life and church are all about them. This is what the church is for—let's not merely delegate it to the overseas missionaries.
- 4) Find short term missions trips to send your adults into as a way of pro-actively growing future leaders. This should be a combined effort between the elder board, pastors, and missions committee. Put together a list of people who are and will be leading the church ministries in the next 10 years and set a goal to send 6-8 of them each year. The elders or pastor should go to those people and challenge them to go and offer $_____ and assistance in fund raising to help them go if they will consider it. Choose the short term ministry carefully so they get good training and debriefing, and so they are actually doing front-line ministry (evangelism and discipleship) as a main function of their trip. Construction teams should be invested in the locals during the evenings and on prayer walks in the mornings. The mission committee should then work with these folks to help the family while they are away and help them re-acclimate to the church when they return so they don't waste what they've learned.
- 5) Challenge the congregation to give sacrificially to mission crises when they occur and host "all nighter" prayer events in those situations.
- 6) Lead the charge to encourage parents to pray their kids into missions and to keep missions in front of the congregation weekly. (Video clips during the offering, missionary stories, skyping with missionaries during small groups or Sun. services, etc.)
- 7) Look for couples with solid marriages to challenge, pray for, and send from the church. Every church has these kinds of people who are using their faith and walk with Christ merely to make money and grow spiritually. Kick them out of the nest into a short-term trip or two to see if you can change their world view onto things that are more eternal.
- 8) Be pro-actively involved in staff care with the sending mission organization for career missionaries going from the church. (Regular encouragement for their children, sending a team to work with them yearly, continuation of relationships/friendships pro-actively, care packages, live call to congregation regularly on Sunday AM, marriage encouragement, male accountability, etc.)
- 9) Contact the campus ministry staff to let them know beforehand that your youth are coming so that they can pursue them when they get to campus as freshmen. The first two-three months of college are vital in finding direction and identity for young people, so be proactive about getting them into an outreach-minded campus group. This will help your young people to approach college as a mission instead of merely as a training ground for their own development.
